PASTOR'S CORNER
God Wants Our Best

But let us not forget that He always does expect and require of each of us the best we can do. The faithfulness Christ wants and approves implies the doing of all our work, our business, our trade, our daily toil, as well as we can. Let no one think that religion does not apply to private life. It applies to the way you do your most common work just as readily as to your praying and keeping of the commandments. Whatever your duty is, you cannot be altogether faithful to God unless you do your best. To slur any task is to do God's work badly; to neglect it is to rob God. The universe is not quite complete without your work well done, however small that work may be.

— J. R. Miller

WORD FOR THE WEEK

You are my hiding place; you will protect me from trouble and surround me with songs of deliverance.

— Psalm 32:7 (NIV)
